

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, June 27.

It is possible, and many shrewd and impartial observers consider it probable, that neither Harrison and Reid nor Cleveland and Stevenson will receive the votes of a majority of the Electoral College to be elected next November, owing to the opposition of the silver men and people's party combined in the West and South. Should such be the case there would be no election by the Electoral College, and the duty of electing a President would devolve upon the House of Representatives, while the Senate would have to elect the Vice-President, both bodies voting by States instead of a usual way.

At first glance one is apt to say: "Well, that would give us Cleveland for President and Reid for Vice-President." But would it? A great deal of attention is being given to this question by able constitutional lawyers, and the ablest man is, the more he hesitates to express a decided opinion about it. The generally accepted idea has, of course, been that the Senators and Representatives of each of the political parties would be in honor bound to vote for the man nominated by the party to which they belong for the office to be filled. But that has been considerably shaken by a statement to the effect that there would not exist a single good reason why any Senator or Representative should feel under the slightest obligation to vote for the man who fails to receive an election before the people, and that each Senator and Representative would be constitutionally free to vote for any one he pleased, without regard to the names upon the national tickets of the several political parties.

Should this view of the matter be generally accepted, Mr. Cleveland would never be the choice of the House should that body have to elect the next President. There are several reasons why, but one is sufficient to explain why. Notwithstanding the several seeming defeats which free coinage has received in the House during this session, a majority of that body is strongly in favor of the free coinage of silver, and would vote if the question came to a vote devoid of side issues; and no one knows this any better than the members who so skillfully managed the business as to get the bill permanently sidetracked before it ever came to a direct vote. Having these views, it would be expecting much to expect these men to vote for Mr. Cleveland, whose opposition to free coinage exceeds that of Mr. Harrison, when they would have a chance to name a President friendly to free coinage, unless compelled by honor to do so.

Six months ago it hardly seemed possible that the Republican and Democratic leaders could be as deeply interested as they are at this time in the outcome of the People's Party Convention which is to be held at Omaha on July 4. The reason, however, is obvious. The nominations of Harrison and Cleveland by their respective parties have made it certain to the leaders that the votes of a large—how large no one can say at this time—element in both parties will go to the People's Party if strong candidates are nominated and even a fairly good platform adopted by the Omaha Convention. Pressure is being brought to bear upon Judge Graham by the Republican leaders to prevent his allowing the use of his name as a candidate before the People's Party Convention. His candidacy would draw very largely from the working men in the Republican Party.

Congressional matters are pretty nearly at a standstill, as far as outside appearances go, and there is little work being done by the committees, although there is much yet to be done before the regular appropriation bills are disposed of. If the House can get a quorum this week, as its leaders expect, an attempt will be made to rush the appropriation bills, all of which ought to be available on July 1.

It is now said that President Harrison has decided that the successor to Mr. Blaine will be appointed only to serve of the remainder of this administration, leaving him free if he be so disposed to make up an entirely new cabinet should he be re-elected.

They Ride to Church on Bicycles.
The last issue of the Wheel contains the following: "While the Watessing (N. J.) minister has been preaching against Sunday riding, a Manchester (Ct.) church has had a cycle stable built for the benefit of the many members of the congregation who ride to the house of worship on wheels. Other churches in small towns could follow the example with profit."
"At Manchester, Ct., a few years ago the man who would ride a bicycle on Sunday was looked upon as a sinner almost beyond redemption. Last week the Committee of the Centre Church voted to set apart one of the horse-sheds in the rear of the church for a bicycle shed. A great many persons, ladies as well as gentlemen, who live in the surrounding country, now come to the Sunday and weekly services on wheels. When they are listening to the words of the sermon mischievous youngsters experiment with the bicycles, and not a little damage has been done by their careless use. Now they will have a bicycle stall in which to store their wheels while attending services. The shed will be fitted up with stands, a whisk-broom, clothes-brush, mirror, washstand and toilet articles will be supplied, and all will be under the guardianship of a man especially selected for his inability to master the untamed steed."

The readers of THE CITIZEN will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
